

Press Release

KEO, the Archeological Bird of the future and South Africa

On the invitation of Mr. Jilani BEN HADDADA, General Secretary of the Pan African Postal Union (U.P.A.P), the KEO project will be presented during the Administrative Council of the U.P.A.P. at Cape Town from the 22nd to the 24th of June 2001.

In order to accomplish its universal goal, KEO has to make use of the most adapted means of communication so that it can reach out to every man, woman and child present on Planet Earth. Today, the most widely utilized medium between all the people on this planet is the global postal network.

To permit a large number of Africans to participate in KEO, an international project, its creator, Jean-Marc Philippe, would like to establish a collaboration with the U.P.A.P. and through it reach out to the other African countries.

The Project Coordination Team of Programme KEO is willing to visit all the countries that would like to have a personalized presentation of the project.

The Creator and the Communications Director of the KEO project will be at your entire disposal for all further information at the PROTEA HOTEL.
